All Demands Fully Satisfied

THE BUILDER

Who builds wisely demands beauty and utility in the builders' hardware which enters into the construction of his home. The best is none too good.

THE PAINTER

Insists upon having paint of the highest preservative quality and best finish. He won't use low grade paint for his home.

THE PLUMBER

Will have no makeshift fittings, no cheap pipe or "just as good" sanitary conveniences—He wants the very best.

THE FARMER

Wants the best plow, enlivator, wind engine, mower or other implement. He wants a staunch, service-giving equipment for all his farm work.

THE TEAMSTER.

Calls for the best harness because it gives the best service and is the cheapest in the end.

AS OTHERS THINK SO DO WE-WE KEEP THE BEST BECAUSE IT'S THE MOST IN DE-MAND.

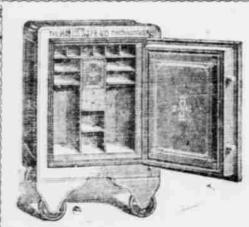

There is not a line represented in our large stock of builders' materials, plumbers' supplies, farm implements, wagons, harness, paints and general hardware that does not carry a guaranty of the highest service giving quality on its trade mark. The careful buver should think of this.

-The-Valny Affair

By DONAL HAMILTON HAINES

(Copyright 1910, by The Pearson

"I'll bet that Russian doesn't know. I'll bet he's bluffing, and he's got bayonets enough to get away with it. Probably he's been hankering for excitement as much as you have-only he made up his mind a month ago how he'd handle it when it came."-Charrington paused, and then the growing thoughtfulness of Bacon's face led him to say more.-"He'll frame up a bigworded, laudatory report about this thing, and send it to St. Petersburg. They'll read it and say, 'Our consul at Valny's a little wizard! We must put him in the way of things!' And the first thing you know, our little whipper-snapper in the white-wing's get-up will be charge d'affairs in London, with his reputation made by 'The Valny Affair'-and they'll ship you back to Hong Kong as twenty-third undersecretary of the legation!"

"But," insisted Bacon, "I don't see what I'm going to do. If the man's right he's right, and if he's wrong I'll tell him so, he'll apologize and you'll take your peasants and sail away."

Charrington sniffed disdainfully. "Last night," he said reprovingly, you told Yvette and me, in the strictest confidence, that you believed you'd make no end of a diplomat if you had your chance. I'm driven to confess that you have not the faintest instincts of one. Let's go over to that cufe again, and you let your imagination work while I talk to Yvette!" .

Bacon sat moodily at the little table while Charrington chattered with the girl in a strange mixture of French and English. Bacon paid them little attention. He had gloomy thoughts of the future. After all, he confessed to himself, he was a tremendous green-He wished for a bit of Strolboff's easy confidence. He a diplomat! Probably Charrington was right; he lacked the first instincts of one. He would have to send a report of the fiasco to Washington-and they would read between the lines. In the course of fifteen or twenty years he would probably be a clerk more or less like Jones. Not altogether like Jones -Bacon's self-respect lingered long enough to add that much. He became limly conscious that Charrington and the girl were talking about him.

"Our friend Bacon here," Charring-He is confronted with all the diplomatic strength of the Russias -and he is very much scared!"

"Not zat leetle Strolboff-oh, no!"

"The very same!" he confessed, and then plunged into a contorted descripwould you suggest, Yvette?"

saucily from Bacon to her questioner, popped into her head.

The girl nodded. "Good!" exclaimed Bacon. "When ou get there-stay there! Don't pay any attention to Jones; he may drop dead with surprise, but that won't matter. Do you understand?"

Again the girl nodded, and Bacon started toward the door on the run, but stopped short.

"Can you speak anything but French and English?" he inquired sharply. "Ein wonig deutsch." admitted Yvette in a trembling tone.

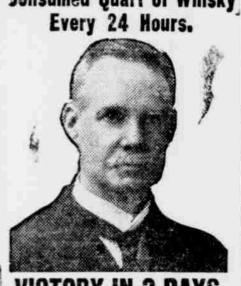

"Thank God for making Alsatians!" muttered Bacon. "Well, when you get to the consulate, you speak nothing but German to anyone but me. Now Twenty minutes later Charrington tormed into the consulate. He found Bacon seated at his desk placidly smoking his pipe. In the corner of the room sat a woman, rather loudly but fashionably dressed, and deeply veiled. She held a handkerchief in her hand in the manner of one who has either wept or expects to weep.

"Here, you one-horse diplomat!" come out of your hole and do something, or I'll make a noise higher up. That Russian's been shooting at my men when they attempted to run a lot and money involved here!"

RUSSIAN ARMY OFFICERS COR-PUPT.

Fifty Russian officers are on trial t Moscow, and an astounding state of orruption in the supply department of the Russian army has been revealed. It it stated that one firm alone has paid away over 20 million dollars in bribes in the last twentyfive years. One of the members of the receiving committee is alleged to have been paid $135,000 on one transaction alone. So heavy has been the bibery that the clerks of the department deliberately spoiled the samples of any firm which did not give bribes. It is calculated that the Russian govern nent has lost 50 million dollars at least n the last few years on this account Russia has always had an unenvi able reputation for corruption. When Port Arthur surrendered a large numer of Continental critics of the land stormed Charrington, "you've got to of the czar did not hesitate to openly accuse General Stoessel of having accepted a large bribe from the Japanse. Reports were floating around at the time that half his staff were subof peasants on board—and one of my sidized by the Japanese. These remen got pinked in the arm!
